delegation from the state of Washington will cast a solid vote for Cleveland.

Delegates from the Silver States had another caucus today and, in view of Senator Gorman's refusal to permit the use of his name as a candidate for the presidency, decided to cast their vote for Gov. Boies. A sub-committee was appointed, headed by ex-Senator Thos. Patterson of Colorado, for the purpose of presenting the silver views of the Western delegates to the committee on resolutions. It was decided, in case the platform committee refused to recommend a free coinage, bi-metallic plank, an appeal would be taken to the convention. There was much talk among the delegates present about throwing the support of the silver states to the People's party in case the Democratic convention should not comply with the demands of the silver interests, and it is probable that the representatives of the silver states will wait upon the convention of that party at Omaha, July 4, with that purpose in view.

The conviction that Cleveland will be the leader of the Democratic party had full possession of the delegates today and was so fixed that all other things were simply done to reach that result.

At 11:30 tonight ex-Secretary Whitney stated that Cleveland was sure of 626 votes on the first ballot, a gain of 23 since yesterday. Among the states represented in the gain are Arkansas and Kentucky. Mr. Whitney stated that there had been no conclusion reached as to vice president. During the day there was much opposition to Gray, but late tonight his star is again in the ascendant. The trouble began in the Indiana forces, when the anti-Cleveland men desired revenge on Gray for throwing the vote of the state to Cleveland. Bynum of Indiana, Stevenson and Morrison of Illinois, Boies and Campbell were mentioned in Gray's place.

THE ANTI-SNAPPERS OUT. A Hot Session With Many Taunts About Mugwumps.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The credentials committee had a surplus of lawyers and parliamentarians in its membership and consequently progress was slow this afternoon at its meeting for the consideration of contested seats. Ex-Representative Lamb was chosen chairman, and he did all he could to urge the work along, but with indifferent success. The first business done was to approve the roll of delegates submitted so far as concerned the uncontested seats.

The delegates from Arizona and New Mexico moved that the committee report in favor of giving each of those territories six votes instead of two in the convention. The delegates from the two territories made an earnest appeal to the committee to treat them with same liberality with which the Minneapolis convention treated New Mexico. Both territories, they said, would have been states now but for their Democracy. There was vigorous opposition to the proposition, led by Mr. Bragg of Wisconsin, who was against the "rotten borough principle." The motion was finally carried without objection after the defeat, 26 to 12, of an amendment to give them six seats but only two votes.

The Syracuse Convention Delegates

met this afternoon. After some discussion they decided that they would present their case to the credentials committee and not let it go absolutely by default. They appointed a committee consisting of Fred R. Coudert, Alex. E. Orr, Norton Chase, F. O. Mason, Franklin D. Locke, Edward B. Whitney and Edward M. Shepard to present the matter to the credentials committee. Gen. Bragg of Wisconsin, who has been active in the Cleveland movement, was chosen the committee man to direct affairs and represent the Syracuse people on the credentials committee. The first reference to the fight came up when the credentials committee assembled this afternoon and a motion was made to exclude the contestants and contestees.

Bourke Cockran of New York, a committee man, said he did not know that he was here as a contestee. So far as the regular delegation knew, there was no contest.

Chairman Lamb said the committee had not been informed of a contest. A few minutes later, Gen. Bragg in filing the Syracuse credentials gave the first notice officially of the contest. Mr. Perry Belmont expressed the hope that the committee would grant a hearing to the delegation which Gen. Bragg seemed to represent. There seemed, he said, some doubt whether or not a contest was really to be made. He simply understood that they intended to present their case, and he did not ask seats on the floor.

The response from Gen. Bragg was not very clear.

The matter again came up when in the call of states, Mr. Belmont said he understood there was a contest.

Mr. Foote of California, evidently out of patience with the Syracuse fight, was about to move its peremptory disposition when Gen. Bragg said he was surprised at the lack of understanding of what he had said. The filing of the Syracuse credentials, he understood, made a contest.

At this evening's meeting of the committee there were hot words exchanged. To begin with, the Syracuse delegates had adopted a resolution deciding to withdraw their credentials in the interest of harmony. When the chairman of the committee submitted F. R. Coudert's request that he be allowed to make a statement withdrawing the credentials filed today, a motion was made to lay it on the table.

Mr. Foote of California wanted harmony and a hearing for Mr. Coudert. Chairman Lamb found a loop hole through which Mr. Coudert could be heard in the fact that Mr. Cockran had not objected in the forenoon when Gen. Bragg filed the credentials.

The motion to lay on the table was lost. Then Mr. St. Clair of West Virginia denounced the Syracuse delegates. He said they should be called down. He had a sharp colloquy with General Bragg in reference to the Mugwump followers of Cleveland.

General Bragg said the Democratic party had been strengthened, not by arming people, but by asking people to come in and treating them courteously. If they were manful enough to acknowledge their sins, he would not cast anything in the way of repentance.

Mr. Cockran moved to give Mr. Coudert all the time he wanted.

Mr. Coudert said he had not expected to have his democracy impugned by Mr.

Cockran, whose political fortunes he had tried to advance.

Mr. Cockran disclaimed impeaching Mr. Coudert's democracy. The resolution was then read and the contest was declared withdrawn.

Wilson for Permanent Chairman.

The committee on permanent organization has elected Wm. L. Wilson of West Virginia, permanent chairman, and S. P. Sheerin of Indiana, permanent secretary. The name of F. G. Dubignon of Georgia, was presented for permanent chairman, but Mr. Dubignon explained that the presentation of his name was without his approval. Both men were voted for, however, and Mr. Wilson, evidently having a decided majority, his election was made unanimous on motion of Mr. Dubignon's friends, without the result of the ballot being announced.

THEY WERE BARRED OUT.

Good Democrats Stood in the Rain Because Some One Blundered.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The only dissension which occurred in today's convention proceedings was over the attempt of several delegates to throw open the galleries to the crowds of eager Democrats standing outside in the rain. No one seems to be able to explain the reason. Throughout the entire session there were 8000 unoccupied seats in the galleries in the convention hall. The national committee came in for most of the blame for this. It is probable that never in the history of the American national conventions have the press arrangements been so wretched and the accommodations for the active workers so inadequate as on the present occasion. While there were 8000 vacant gallery seats, there were over 400 representatives of the press, 200 of whom were representatives of daily papers, standing on the outside unable to get admittance to the hall. Most of these gentlemen were from the western and southern states and had failed to secure the usual courtesies, because of the matter being referred to the Washington press committee which distributed the seats before these newspaper men made application. Only 350 working seats were accorded the press. No local committee was appointed to manage the press arrangements.

Several vain attempts were made during the day to open the vacant galleries to outsiders, particularly to Union veterans of the late war. It was felt that this matter should be disposed of by the committee on resolutions. When a Southern delegate inquired, "What is the matter with the ex-Confederates," a discrete delegate from a Northern state promptly moved to refer the whole question to the committee on resolutions.

FREE TRADE AND FREE SILVER.

Platform Builders Up to Their Ankles in Water and Resolutions.

CHICAGO, June 21.—Immediately after the adjournment of the convention the committee on resolutions met in the room set apart for it in the convention building and organized by electing Hon. Thomas F. Bayard of Delaware, chairman, and C. H. Jones, secretary. The floor of the room was water soaked from the rain which dripped through the roof of the convention hall and the committee accepted Chairman Brice's invitation to hold its sessions in the parlor of the Palmer House which had been reserved for the national committee. The committee extended its thanks to the Union League Club, a Republican organization, for an invitation to meet in the parlor of that club. Several resolutions were introduced and action thereon was deferred. Most of these referred to the tariff and silver questions. The tariff resolutions were of a decidedly radical character, declaring in substance for a tariff for revenue only. There were half a dozen resolutions introduced on the finance question, those from the silver states and some of the southern states being an emphatic declaration for the free and unlimited coinage of silver, while those from the eastern states usually disposed of the subject by a demand for "honest money."

The following resolution sent in by Representative Bacon of New York, and endorsed by the Democratic members of the committee on banks and banking of the National House was introduced:

Resolved, That we recognize that the national banking system, under existing laws, partly by reason of the diminished amount and increased price of the bonds of the United States, has become inadequate to the needs of the people. We pledge the Democratic party to such an amendment and alteration of the laws relating to banking as will afford to all localities an opportunity to supply themselves with adequate banking facilities and safe, elastic and properly distributed currency.

Ice in the Flames.

[Special to the Press.]

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, June 21.—One of the ice houses owned by Nathaniel Webster of Gloucester, Mass., was burned down at 11 o'clock last night. The fire caught from the engine. Three vessels had taken ice from the building during the day.

Aroostook's Road Begun.

HOULTON, June 21.—Notwithstanding the rain a large crowd witnessed the formal turning of the first sod on the Bangor & Aroostook railroad today. Amidst the booming of cannon, cheers and good wishes, the enterprise which means so much to Aroostook was successfully started.

Will Invade Boothbay.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, June 21.—On Friday Dunlap Commandery of Bath, Hugh De Payens of Melrose, Trinity of Augusta and Bethany of Lawrence will dine at Boothbay Harbor. Five hundred Sir Knights will be in line in the parade on the arrival of the steamer.

Reardon-Tarbox.

Yesterday, at Milford, Mass., Mr. Wallace R. Tarbox of Fryeburg and Miss Mary S. Reardon were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's brother. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. W. Whitney, pastor of the Universalist church of Milford. Miss Edith Rand of Jamaica Plain and Miss Fannie Hodson, niece of the bride, were the little maids of honor. Each carried a bouquet of rosebuds. The bride was formerly a teacher in Belfast, this state, but for the past six years she has been in the suit department at R. H. White's, Boston, where she was highly esteemed. Her friends in the store presented her a handsome silver tea service.

TROUBLES OF THE GLEASONS.

A Family Skeleton Exhibited in Court in Waterville.

[Special to the Press.]

WATERVILLE, June 21.—A great crowd packed the Superior Court rooms this morning to hear the divorce case of Gleason vs. Gleason. Hon. W. T. Haines appeared for the plaintiff and Hon. S. G. Brown for the defendant. Judge W. G. Hall presided. Mr. Fred Gleason is a well known farmer of Oakland. Mrs. Gleason is a middle-aged woman, who in support of her allegations of cruel and abusive treatment, testified that her husband pulled her hair, beat her, and was quite fond of throwing pails of water over her when things did not go to suit him.

Mr. Gleason, in defense, acknowledged to have used water a little too freely, but thought the temper of his wife warranted it, while he claimed to have been attacked by his wife who had a case knife in her hand with which a severe wound was inflicted in his arm, the scar being exhibited.

Other witnesses, however, testified that this scar was the result of an injury inflicted by a meat hook. So the testimony on both sides went on showing that the relations between these two persons were, to say the least, unpleasant, and after the warmest kind of a defense by Lawyer Brown, the case was given to Mrs. Gleason.

M'KINLEY SPOKE.

New York Republicans Out in Force To Hear Him.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The first grand rally of the local Republicans took place tonight at Carnegie Music Hall, 5000 people being present. President Blanchard, of the Republican Club, occupied the chair, made the opening speech and then introduced Governor McKinley of Ohio, who was received with applause. During his speech he said the Republican party made no mistake in 1884 when it nominated that splendid American, the ripest and best statesman whose family bereavement all mourn. He was cheated out of the presidency by fraud. Mr. McKinley dilated on the benefits of protection and paid a compliment to "Tom Reed and the 51st Congress."

Whitelaw Reid and Mr. Depew spoke briefly.

A BUILDING FOR BOWDOIN.

Sixty Thousand Dollar Gift to the College—Class Day Exercises.

BRUNSWICK, June 21.—Bowdoin College class day exercises were held today, this morning's exercises being in Memorial Hall. Following is the programme:

Prayer.....W. S. Randall
Oration.....T. F. Nichols
Poem.....J. C. Hull
Poem.....W. B. Kenniston

The oration was an able effort on the responsibilities and reward of teachers. The poem was a graceful and finished effort. This afternoon's exercises were held under the old oak.

The programme in the afternoon was as follows:

Opening Address.....C. S. Rich
History.....T. F. Nichols
Prophecy.....T. F. Nichols
Parting Address.....H. F. Linscott
Smoking Pipe of Peace.
Singing Ode.
Cheering the Halls.
Farewell.

The class papers were all admirably written and well delivered. The closing ceremonies were especially affecting. This evening the dance on the green was had around the oak. The campus was flooded over and profusely decorated. The Japanese lanterns with the fine costumes made a scene of beauty long to be remembered.

At the annual meeting of the Board of Bowdoin College held this evening, a communication from General Thomas H. Hubbard, conveyed the announcement of a gift to Bowdoin College of a scientific building of an estimated cost of sixty thousand dollars from Mr. Edward T. Searles of New York. A joint committee of the board was appointed to express the thanks of the college and to co-operate with the donor in the construction of the building.

MR. REID'S TURN.

He Was Yesterday Notified of His Nomination.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., June 21.—The committee appointed to notify Whitelaw Reid of his nomination arrived here about quarter past eleven o'clock, and proceeded at once to Mr. Reid's residence. They were cordially received by Mr. Reid and at once proceeded to the business of the day. Mr. Dubois made the speech of notification.

In his reply Mr. Reid said:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen: Your visit at my home and this formal statement deepen on my mind the impression which the known act of the convention has already produced. The occasion is too great for the expression of merely personal feelings. Even my natural and heartfelt sense of gratitude for the confidence shown and the high trust devolved upon me in this case too impotent to those you represent for more than a word.

The party which has guided this country on its path of unparalleled prosperity with but four years interval since 1860, gives official notice through its duly authorized representatives in 44 independent states and 5 territories, of its choice for the second office within the gift of sixty-five millions of free men that cover a continent and are soon to possess once more the seas. A profound sense of responsibility and a more earnest desire to discharge the trust you have reposed, to the satisfaction now of those you represent, and if successful, for the best interests of the country afterwards, are the overmastering emotions of the hour.

Not having sought the great honor you confer, as you have justly stated, I am the more prompt in saying that, as a citizen and Republican, I shall not shrink from the duty you impose. There will be a more convenient opportunity for such expression of political convictions as may be thought appropriate to the times and the actual issue. But having already carefully considered the statement of our party principles put forth by your convention, I may say now that I accept and adopt them in full.

AMERICAN JERSEY CATTLE CLUB.

Volume Thirty-six of the Year Book of This Organization.

Running down the list of members we see the names of noted lawyers and law-makers, preachers, editors, famous financiers, doctors, farmers, governors of states and generals of both Federal and Confederate armies. Indeed it seems that in the course of her career the little brown eyed butter queen captured all classes and conditions of mankind and a few women, three of the last named appearing on the roll, though one of the three has since resigned. Certainly no live stock organization in America represents more intelligence and enterprise or so many millions of dollars in its personal membership, and certainly no organization of its kind has ever done so much for the advancement of the dairy interests of the world as the American Jersey Cattle club.

Organized in 1868 and incorporated by an act of the New York legislature in 1880, it has steadily grown in numbers, power and influence each year of its existence. In December last, at the close of the thirty-sixth volume, the membership numbered 532; number of cattle registered 93,000, of which 26,000 were males and 67,000 were females. Several thousand have been registered since then, so that there are now considerably over 100,000 registered animals of both sexes. Up to the close of this volume the admission fees from members amounted to over $300,000, its annual increase from this source amounting to about $2,000—more than double that of any other pure bred cattle organization. It has a bank deposit of $40,000, its yearly income from all sources ($90,000) being nearly $5,000 in excess of its expenditures.

Its money is used with liberality for the advancement of the Jersey cow and the general promotion of the dairy interests of the country. At the last meeting the club appropriated $10,000 for its exhibit at the Columbian fair. It is no less liberal in its efforts to detect fraud and to keep its record pure, its expenditures in that direction for one year alone amounting to over $3,300, of which sum $2,000 was paid out in investigating the crookedness of one member, who was proved guilty of fraudulent practices in the matter of registering his cattle, was expelled from the club and his cattle stricken from the records. The secretary's office is on Broadway, New York, in which city its annual meetings occur. The membership is scattered over thirty-six states and territories and the various provinces of Canada. Of the 532 members ninety-six have died, three resigned and one was expelled. In order to become a member every applicant has to be recommended by five or more members as a careful and reliable breeder; then if nine-tenths of the votes cast are for his admission he pays $100 fee and assumes the responsibilities and receives all the rights and benefits of membership. No stock is issued to him, and when he dies, resigns or is expelled his interest escheats to the club.—W. Gettys in Breeder's Gazette.

Good Horses.

We have had much to say about the value of good coach horses, but we have never said all that the facts would justify. There are today hundreds of people in any of our large cities searching for safe and stylish carriage horses. Such animals are as hard to get, for anything like a fair price, as good Shetland ponies. In fact these two classes of horses just now seem worth more per pound than any others. The cost of raising a pound of horse is not much more than that of raising a pound of steer, and there is little difference between the cost of a pound of car horse and a pound of carriage horse. One may sell at fourteen cents a pound and the other at thirty-five cents. A difference of twenty-one cents a pound is worth considering.

We understand that some parties are trying to sell grade horses with more or less Percheron blood in them for full blood French coaches. Don't patronize such a house if you can help it. The mares found in any ordinary neighborhood are of all "sorts and colors." To have any approach to uniformity in color the stallion must be as well bred as possible.—Rural New Yorker.

PORTLAND'S GAME.

They Played Better Ball than the Salem Nine Yesterday.

Though Salem did make a bold attempt to win the game in the first inning yesterday, making three hits with a total of four, and three runs, they were unable to keep the lead, the home team out-batted and out-fielded them, and winning handily.

After the home team had been blanked in their half of the first, Salem came in to win. McCarthy lead off with a hit. Deady bunted to Kirmes who threw wild to first, allowing Deady to get there, and McCarthy to get third, Briggs made a fine double to left, both men scoring. Moore was first out on a fly to Clymer. Dorsey hit for a base, sending in Briggs, but was left, as Spear went out Carey to Rogers and Smith struck out.

Portland scored one in the first half of the second, Rogers leading off with a hit, and after Lachance had struck out, taking second on a hit by Clymer to centre, and third, when Killen let the ball go by him. He scored on Burns's single, Clymer going to second and third when Deady let the hit go through him, Burns taking second. Platt hit to Smith who threw to McCarthy, catching Clymer at the plate. Burns and Platt were left as Carey struck out. Salem made one in their half of the same inning, Killen getting a three bagger and scoring on Deady's single.

Portland won the game in the third, when two bases on balls, two hits and a pair of bright yellow errors, one by Deady and the other by Dorsey, yielded four runs. The next and last run was made in the seventh, Kirmes leading off with a hit. O'Brien flied out to Moore, Rogers hit to centre for a single, and Killen let the ball go through him to the fence, Kirmes scoring and Rogers going to third. Lachance flied out to Deady and Rogers was caught at the plate, Deady to McCarthy. As Rogers went by McCarthy he hit him, whether accidentally or not it is hard to say, but Mac, who is one of the quietest of players, got hot and threw the ball at Rogers and hit him in the leg. He apologized after the game for it.

The playing of the home team was very fine, the fielding especially. Burns led at the bat, and Carey fielded his position in a way that is seldom seen in a minor league. Webster umpired finely. The score:

Game Today.

The Salems will again be the opponents of the home team on the Portland grounds this afternoon, and as Killen will pitch they will do their best to win. This club has been very strong against the Portlands and the games have been close and exciting. The game will commence at 3.30. Ladies admitted free to the grounds and grand stand.

News of the Wheelmen.

Portland Wheelmen are much interested in the races to be given in Saco on July 4th by the York County Wheelmen, and a large number of them will go out to attend the meet. Nearly every fast wheelman in Portland, including Brown, Liscomb, Sculley and Tobie, will compete in the races and it is probable also that C. D. Alexander will enter in the 20 mile road race.

Besides the bicycle races there will be two professional and two amateur dashes in which many fast men are entered. Fred Hartwell, the fleetest amateur runner in this city, is entered in both the 100 and the 220 yards amateur dashes. A mile running horse race which promises to be a most exciting event, will conclude the afternoon's sport. The club is trying to make arrangements for a special train to run out from Portland at noon and return immediately after the races. As a special prize for record breaking a fine diamond stud or ring is offered as a reward to the man who will put the Maine record down lowest.

Two well known gentlemen of this city have made a bet that Mr. Frank Brown, who is considered the swiftest racer on a bicycle, can beat a first-rate horse in a run between Portland and Saco and return. One of the gentlemen has gone to Boston to obtain a horse such as he desires and then the minor details of the race will be arranged. A good driver will drive the horse in a light wagon, and Brown will ride his bicycle.

MAINE TOWNS.

Items of Interest Gathered by Correspondents of the Press.

Waterborough.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

Mr. Benjamin Thompson of Kennebunkport, whose great age and remarkable physical and mental activity were so generally noticed in the Maine papers last autumn, has been failing recently. He was 88 years old last December, but still retains his mental faculties to a good degree, and has never until recently had occasion to take medicine prescribed by a physician.

Two children of David Russell of Waterborough, aged seven and nine respectively, were taken suddenly and violently ill while at school on Thursday last. They were at once conveyed to their homes. Dr. Emery was called who pined his skill for four hours before they were out of danger. The symptoms indicated poison of some kind, and the only possible way they could have taken any poison was from lobster eaten in the morning. One or two other members of the family a lobster also but received no injury therefrom.

The great gale of Tuesday was not as severe here as in many other places, no damage being reported more than the destruction of apple trees in some orchards.

A splendid shower, amounting to quite a tempest, passed over Friday giving us considerable rain, which was much needed and greatly revived vegetation.

Bridgton.

Rev. N. Lincoln and wife are making a fortnight's vacation visit at their son-in-law and daughter's, Mr. and Mrs. Frank O. Chadbourn's and incidentally calling on old friends and parishioners. Mr. Lincoln is pastor of the Congregational Church in North Carver, Mass., where he has been located ever since his resignation of the North Bridgton and Harrison pastorate, nearly five years ago.

Orin R. Burnham, started from his home in Ellsworth to make a brief visit in Bridgton and call on old neighbors, but was taken ill at Harrison, where he visited his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Harvey, and as his time was limited, was obliged to return home without coming here.

Mr. Burnham served in the late war, and is filling his fourth year of service as Quartermaster in the Ellsworth Post. Miss Estelle M. Draper, who teaches in Portland, was bridesmaid at the wedding of her cousin, Miss Emma Shaw, at her parental home in Kingsley Falls, Province Ford County. The bridegroom is Mr. Frederick Gibson, a brother of the well-known Portland hotel men. It was a fine affair. The bride, who is a niece of Mrs. D. Draper, has acquaintances in this place, whom she made while visiting here.

R. O. Moulton is much troubled by dogs that have once more invaded his domain and killed eight of his sheep and fifteen lambs and badly torn and mangled six or seven more of the flock. Last fall the dogs killed five of his flock.

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Circle was held at the house of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Burnham June 10th. The following officers were chosen for the coming year: A. L. Burnham, Pres.; Nathan Palmer, Vies Pres.; Charles Stone, Secretary and Treasurer; Carroll Hilton, collector. Mrs. Stone, Mrs. Mrs. Bunham and Mrs. Palmer were chosen a committee to select books.

Cumberland.

WEST CUMBERLAND.

A successful term of school taught by Miss Addie E. LeGrow of Windham, closed in District No. 4 last Friday.

Walter E. Morrill and wife spent Sunday at his father's Josiah Morrill's.

Neal Shaw has commenced to market his strawberries. He and his brothers have a large lot and they promise a good crop.

Children's Sunday was observed at the M. E. Church. Rev. Mr. Clark preached an appropriate sermon to the children in the morning, and in the evening the Sunday School concert, consisting of music, dialogues and declamations, was largely attended.

Canker worms have eaten the leaves from the orchards of Otis A. Mountfort and R. B. Morrison, so the trees look as though fire had run through them. Mr. Mountfort has perhaps the best orchard in town, having raised some years 1000 bushels of apples.

Old Orchard.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

The Camp Meeting season opens next Saturday on the Methodist Grounds by the Second Advents with a convention of Christian workers under the auspices of The New England Advent Christian Advent Camp Meeting Association, under the direction of Rev. Jared Whitman. Among the speakers expected are Rev. H. L. Hastings, editor of The Christian; Rev. E. A. Stockman, editor of The Christian Reporter; Rev. Warren N. Tenney, The Artist Evangelist, and others. The meeting holds over July 4th and a large gathering is expected. Ample arrangements for all, and reduced rates of fair on all railroads.

FOR PRESIDENT.

Benjamin Harrison.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT.

Whitelaw Reid.

FOR GOVERNOR.

Henry B. Cleaves,

OF PORTLAND.

Whether selling a glass of ale is a crime or not is not involved in the nomination and election of a sheriff in Cumberland county. That has a bearing upon the election of legislators whose right it is to make and repeal laws. But it is out of place in the election of a sheriff. A sheriff is a purely executive officer, charged with the duty of executing the laws of the State. What his opinion may be of the wisdom of any of those laws has no bearing upon his duty. No man need accept the office of sheriff, but if he does accept he is morally and legally bound to discharge its duties to the best of his ability. If he does less he is recreant to his trust. If he believes that rumselling is not a crime, and his heart is so filled with love and tenderness for the keeper of a gin mill that he cannot enforce the law against him, let him keep out of the sheriff's office. But after going there voluntarily he cannot neglect to enforce the prohibitory law without violating his oath and subjecting himself to the merited contempt of all right minded people.

THE REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

The attendance of delegates on the Republican convention that met in this city yesterday was very large, and considering the fact that there was no contest for the nomination, it can only be regarded as remarkable and as indicating a very strong and lively interest in all sections of the state in the issues of the impending campaign. A harmonious convention was foreshadowed by the absence of contest for the nomination, but a convention without a contest is apt to be a spiritless body and so the enthusiasm which characterized that of yesterday confirms what its numbers indicated, that the Republicans of Maine are awake to the issues of the campaign, that they fully appreciate their importance and that nothing that hard work will do will be left undone to insure an old time Republican victory in September which will give strength and encouragement to their Republican brethren in other states.

The platform enunciates in clear and concise phrase the well known principles of the Republican party, and pledges the party in state matters to an economical administration, to legislation that shall advance the welfare of all the people, and to the enactment and enforcement of measures which shall promote the cause of temperance through the prohibition of the liquor traffic. Concerning the candidate, it is hardly necessary to speak to a Portland public. Mr. Cleaves has long been a resident of Portland, where he has enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the people, and been frequently honored with election to public office. Every duty which he has been called upon to perform he has discharged with faithfulness and with marked ability. The best testimony to the esteem in which he is held by the people of Maine that could be given him has been afforded by his nomination without a dissenting voice by the great Republican party of the State to the highest State office in its gift, when a nomination is equivalent to an election.

A CAMPAIGN OF ISSUES.

Judging from events of yesterday at Chicago nothing short of a miracle can defeat the nomination of Cleveland, and the age of miracles is passed. His opponents have not yet actually quit the field, they still talk of combinations, and some few of them are rash enough to predict the ex-President's defeat, but it is evident to a careful observer that they counterfeit a confidence they do not feel. They are really down in the dumps, hesitating whether to continue their opposition to the end or try to patch up some sort of a trade with their victorious adversaries.

Looking at the matter from a non-partisan standpoint, the selection of Mr. Cleveland can only be regarded as a fortunate one for the country. National campaigns should turn upon questions of public policy, and these questions should be presented so clearly and distinctly that the average voter may understand them and so be able to vote intelligently. But with candidates who have no very settled convictions on public questions, who when asked what is their belief in regard to the tariff or the coinage reply simply that they are Democrats, the issues are likely to be so obscured that the average voter is able to discover little in the campaign but a triumph of one man or one party over the other. To be sure parties put forth a declaration of principles, but it soon passes out of the public mind, and the people look to the opinions of the party candidate, and the party leaders for an exposition of the party's policy. If the candidates are trimmers, without any pronounced convictions on the questions of the day, the campaign is pretty certain to degenerate into a mere personal or party contest which settles nothing except which particular man shall be President for the next four years, and which party shall control the offices. Under such circumstances the contest becomes largely one for the possession of the spoils—and such a contest is always demoralizing.

If, on the other hand the candidates stand for definite and well defined policies the contest is likely to be a genuine one between rival theories of government, which will stimulate men to thoughtfulness and enlist their attention upon questions, the right settlement of which underlies the general public welfare.

In the nomination of Harrison the Republicans did their part to make the campaign one of the latter kind. They selected a man who has definite and pronounced views upon the tariff and the other great questions of the day, and whose views are known of all men. In selecting Cleveland the Democrats will have done the same thing. Mr. Cleveland has definite opinions and the people know what they are. With these two candidates the contest will be one in which rival policies will be in issue. The voter who supports Mr. Harrison will know that he is voting to give practical effect to his belief that protection will best promote the general welfare of the country. The voter who votes for Cleveland will also know that he is voting to give practical effect to his belief that free trade will best promote the general welfare. In the coming election every voter can cast his vote with the full assurance that he is doing something besides deciding whether Harrison or Cleveland shall be the next President, or whether Republican or Democrats shall collect the revenues and superintend the post offices.

THE OLD SLOGAN.

to debate the people's money the hand of crime was palsied before the irresistible logic of Nelson Dingley. When they sought under the standard of free wool to assassinate the farming interests of Maine, they cringed under the stinging eloquence of Seth L. Milliken. When Democratic parsimony threatened the American navy opposition wilted under the burning eloquence of Charles A. Boutelle. We meet today to round out our leadership with a nominee for Governor who will honor his State as much as his State will honor him.

My friends, we receive the first attack of the enemy. We strike the first blow in removing from the sea of politics this ancient and pestiferous obstacle to national progress. The antiquated hulk of Democracy in Maine has long been marked on the political chart as derelict. I would not say the craft is water-logged; that would jar upon the traditions of true Democracy. Gentlemen, I wish I had time to pay respects to the fragrant and mouldy record of the Democratic party. To every indictment for its life of sin and iniquity it pleads guilty and promises reformation. It is rich in promises, bankrupt in achievement. The Republican party has never made a promise it did not keep. It has a right to stand upon its record of unbroken faith and again demand the confidence of the people. Its foreign policy it dictated from Washington, not from Ottawa. Its political economy is for America, not for England.

Protection, Reciprocity, Stable Money the Republican party has given to the people. They shine in their splendor of truth and light your path to glorious victory in September, the forerunner of the national triumph that awaits us in November.

The Republican party, God bless it! Its past has been glorious; its future will be grander, writing across the history of our beloved country chapters of advancing civilization, wide-spread prosperity, and the triumphs of a people, lovers of liberty, progressive in thought, lofty in aspiration, leading the triumphal march of the nations of the world.

Immediately after the speech, ex-Governor Robie presented the following resolutions, which were unanimously adopted:

The recent severe affliction which has visited one of the most illustrious families of our state and nation deserves appropriate consideration at this time by the Republican party of the state of Maine, of which the late Hon. James G. Blaine has been a series of years its loyal and devoted associate. Therefore

Resolved, That the high personal character and lofty attainments of the late Hon. James G. Blaine, a native of our state, and but recently one of its most illustrious families, have endeared him to all of our people and a large company of devoted friends will forever cherish the memory of his pure and unclouded life, complete with all the golden fruits of integrity, honor and filial duty. And our citizens of all parties with regret and regretful sympathy, in the fullness of his life, and in the fullness of his benediction that he was always faithful.

Resolved, That the representative of nearly every municipality of our state, in convention assembled, with feelings of profound sorrow extend their own and the heartfelt sympathy of many homes to Hon. James G. Blaine and wife and the members of his bereaved family, and especially to the widow of the deceased, in this hour of their great affliction, and we join in the prayers which come from every cottage door and palace gate of our state, that the burdens of this severe bereavement may be borne with fortitude in faith, and be tempered with that divine assistance and aid which human power and words are inadequate to bestow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be signed by the president and secretary of the convention and be forwarded to the family of the deceased.

Judge Savage of Auburn, moved that all other resolutions be referred to the committee on resolutions without debate. It was passed.

On motion of Hon. S. W. Matthews of Caribou, the temporary organization was made permanent.

Hon. E. Dudley Freeman, from the committee on credentials, reported

1228 Delegates Present

The convention next took a recess to enable the various counties to select and present their vice presidents, members of the resolutions committee and members of the state committee. In Androscoggin there was a contest between F. W. Parker and Seth M. Carter, which resulted in the choice of Mr. Carter by a vote of 43 to 34.

The committee on resolutions retiring to make up their report, the chairman introduced who was present. Senator Hale, being enthusiastically received, complimented highly the speech made by Mr. Heath at the opening of the convention, and went on to speak of the great problems which confronted the Republican party when it rescued the country from the rule of Grover Cleveland. The problems then before the party were great, involving high responsibilities and far-reaching consequences. But the party had met them successfully. The Fifty-first Congress had undertaken the great work of revising the tariff. It had formulated a tariff bill, which at first, was misunderstood. And that misunderstanding had involved the party in a crushing defeat in 1890. But since then the tariff bill had vindicated itself and the party. The exports of American products the last year had amounted to one thousand million dollars, and the importations had exceeded the average for the last six years by a hundred and seventy millions of dollars. The balance of trade had been in favor of the nation, and there was no overburdening of the treasury more than ever. This phenomenal prosperity was due to the economic policy of the Republican party. That party also had taken the great proposition of reciprocity and made it a part of protection. It was also the policy of the Republican party to create coast defenses and a navy for the protection of the many billion dollars' worth of property along our coasts.

The Republican party also had made the old soldier and his children not beggars but wards of the nation. Against the constant opposition of the Democrats it had given to the old soldiers "over four hundred millions of dollars, and God be praised."

Speaking of Mr. Blaine, Mr. Hale said: "I know that there is in his own heart a sense of relief and that he will do everything he can in the contest coming for party success. And I know that he will first at the September election lead the way and afterwards contribute his efforts generously as he always has."

Loud applause greeted Mr. Hale's reference to Mr. Blaine, except when he referred to Mr. Blaine's affliction, the audience then maintaining a sympathetic silence.

In speaking of the nomination of the candidate for Governor, Mr. Hale referred to the fact that the convention was about, for the first time, to tender the nomination unanimously to Hon. Henry B. Cleaves of Portland, a compliment unprecedented since the days of Hannibal Hamlin.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hale's speech the committee on resolutions, not being ready to report, it was voted to adjourn until afternoon.

When the chairman announced that nominations were in order,

Judge J. W. Symonds
arose in his place to nominate Cleaves. But he was at once called to the platform, where he was received with loud cheers. He said:

"At the approaching close of two Republican administrations, one in the state and one in the nation, the great political party which, with brief interruption for a generation now, has guided the councils of the Republic, guarding for us all the interests of good government both in the state and in the nation, returns once more to seek the genuine sources of its strength and inspiration in the beating of the popular heart and the impulse of the popular will. From its origin, the expression of the national mind and conscience, the embodiment of the popular thought and feeling, the Republican party, first seizing the helm when the storm of the Rebellion broke, soon became, and has long continued to be, the supreme agency by which the people of this country have conducted their own affairs and wrought out their own ends."

It has been so in the past; it will be so in the future. The spirit of the times and the needs of the hour summon us again to the field. The course of events, the progress of business, the movement of American thought and feeling, the underlying conviction that American interests are in the hands of their friends when Republicans are dealing with them, all tend to drift the people, more and more, towards the steady standards of the Republican party."

"A great controversy over the nomination for the Presidency has passed by, leaving the party in unbroken line, an unbroken whole, entrenched in power, occupying the heights which it knows well how to guard for the sake of the interests of the whole country."

"The re-nomination of President Harrison means his re-election, the continuance in power of an administration already tried and approved, clean in every department, which has vindicated the integrity and efficiency of the nation's government in every field of its action, under which unexampled prosperity has prevailed, and which has at the same time upheld the honor of the country and maintained the peace of nations."

"Mr. Blaine—over whose great and recent sorrow the state itself profoundly moved, draws near, to grieve with him. Mr. Blaine's name and the splendid services he has rendered illustrate, and will forever illustrate, a great period of our country's history, and even the Presidency would hardly add to his fame. He has himself, the great party leader, been the first to point the way the party should go, to merge all minor differences and give earnest, active, hearty, whole-souled and immediate support to the men who have been honorably nominated at Minneapolis, worthy as they are alike of the enthusiasm of the party and the confidence of the nation."

"In our own state, we have ground only for congratulation. The signs of the times were never fuller of favorable meaning and augury than now. There is no herald from any quarter, there is no omen in all the sky, that is not of victory, and above the political horizon the light of promise flames from every star. The opening note of this campaign is a note of triumph, swelling to the close; and Republican Maine will make the Republican echoes all over the land when her voice is heard in September."

"Four years ago we had our controversy, here in this hall, when the present distinguished chief magistrate of our state was nominated. There was some excitement then, but when the convention was over it was found that the man who had been defeated in the convention was the first in the field, and the last to remain, doing laborious and valuable service for the interests of the Republican party. From that time to this, the current of public opinion in our party in this state, the tide of popular feeling, has set steadily and surely towards him for the next Governor of Maine, until now, from Aroostook to York, on the sea-board where he has lived, and among the mountains where he was born, there is no length and breadth of our state, he is called with one accord and one acclaim."

"In the name, then, of his blameless private life and character, unchallenged and without a shadow of reproach, his military and civil record, of his eminent legal attainments and rare administrative and executive capacity, of his distinguished service already rendered to the state in the legislature and in the office of Attorney General, of his staunch Republicanism and of the concuring sentiment of the Republicans of Maine, and in the prediction that a wise, able, honorable and useful administration of that high office will be assured by his presence in it, I nominate as our candidate for Governor, the Hon. Henry B. Cleaves of Portland."

Judge Symonds was frequently interrupted by applause, and at the end cheered heartily.

Hon. E. B. Nolley

of Bangor, in behalf of the eastern portion of the state, seconded the nomination of the man who was expected to be a tower of strength in the coming presidential campaign. It was useless to disguise the fact that the Republicans of Maine had been disappointed that James G. Blaine had not been nominated for President. But the Republicans of Maine were not accustomed to sulk. They recognized that the man who had been elected was clear, able and tried; and they would support it with old-time vigor. The speaker then eulogized Mr. Cleaves.

Herbert M. Lord, Esq.,
of Rockland, seconded the nomination in behalf of Knox county. It was not always, he said, the best thing for the nominations of a party to be given by acclamation, since the preliminary contests often put the party in fighting trim for the contests of the election. The State of Maine believed in her own soldiers, lawyers and statesmen. And he was glad, here in the city of Portland, the home of the great parliamentarian, the home of Reed [cheers], here in the State of Maine, the home of that great statesman who could lead the small democracy [cheers], to present to a Republican convention the name of one of the state's most distinguished citizens, Hon. Henry B. Cleaves. [Loud cheers.]

In behalf of the Republican delegation of Lincoln county

of Whitefield, seconded the nomination, saying:

The Republicans of this state have not forgotten the faithful services of the soldiers of Maine in the great Civil War. Our obligations to them are co-extensive with the life of this republic. The last victories of the Union soldiers rendered it possible for the Republican party to originate and consummate in the thirty years the most wonderful and the most glorious achievements for the advancement of American industries, the elevation of American citizens and the happiness of American homes, that were ever recorded upon the brightest pages of political history. It is with glowing pride that we have come today from the cities and towns, from the verdant hills and the fertile valleys of Maine to salute the beautiful and prosperous city of Portland and to honor and crown one of her worthy citizens. We have come today to take him by the hand and to say to him with no dissenting voice, because you were a Union soldier, because you were faithful in the discharge of your duty as attorney general of Maine, because of your unflinching faith in the immortal principles of the Republican party and because of your integrity and honor, we select you as the mailed knight who shall win the undoubted gubernatorial victory on the twelfth day of September next by the gleaming sword of protective tariff and advancing banners of assured reciprocity. I therefore, in behalf of the delegation from Lincoln county second the nomination for the Republican candidate for Governor of the Hon. Henry B. Cleaves. For Henry B. Cleaves, the soldier boy who left his affectionate bride and home to fight in the defence of his country and flag, I now propose three cheers.

The cheers were given with a will. A. W. Gilman of Foxcroft, as a "hayseed fellow, who hoes the corn and milks the cows," as he described himself, captured the convention with his witty speech in seconding the nomination for Piscataquis.

James O. Bradbury, Esq.,
of Saco, seconded the nomination for York; and L. T. Carleton, Esq., of Winthrop, for Kennebec. Mr. Carleton spoke for Mr. Cleaves as an old soldier.

Judge A. R. Savage of Auburn spoke for Androscoggin; after which the vote was put.

"All delegates in favor of the nomination of Henry B. Cleaves, will rise," said Chairman Heath.

The scene that followed in the hall was remarkable. Probably never more than in the history of the history of the Republican party of Maine, has such a scene been witnessed in a state gubernatorial convention. The delegates on floor and galleries arose as one body; the chairman declared the nomination unanimous, and simultaneously the great audience broke into a loud cheer.

Messrs. T. R. Simonton of Camden, L. T. Carleton of Winthrop and S. W. Matthews of Caribou were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Cleaves of his nomination and escort him to the hall.

The Platform

was next in order. It was read by Clarence Hale, Esq., the temperance plank being applauded especially.

The Platform

The Republican party of Maine, assembled in convention, in opening the campaign for the year 1892, presents to the people of the state the following as a statement of the principles upon which an appeal is made to all citizens in the state who agree with its sentiments:

In this centennial year, the spirit of patriotism and pride is alive in the hearts of the people. It dwells with satisfaction upon the unexampled growth and prosperity presented to the world by the country which, with the exception of four years, has for the lifetime of a generation, been under the administration of the Republican party.

In matters touching the affairs of the state it is pledged to:

A prudent and economical administration. A gradual reduction of the state debt. Such an adjustment of the burdens of taxation as shall impose an equal tax upon all property.

A pure and carefully guarded elective system.

A legislative and executive policy which shall improve the condition and maintain the rights of all people who labor, and a constant effort, both by legislative act and individual example, to develop and improve the natural resources of the state and to keep the men and money of Maine at home for the benefit of all its people.

It seems plainly the great benefit which has come to the people of Maine from the daily belief in the cause of temperance and prohibition, and it will continue unflinching in its fidelity to this great principle.

In matters of national policy the Republicans of Maine are committed to all the great principles of the party.

The protection of American labor which builds it up against foreign competition increases the wealth of the state and secures to it, by the opening of new markets for the products of American labor to be paid for in articles of home production which do not compete with our labor.

A sound currency in which the aim shall be to keep gold and silver in circulation, and a system of coast defenses.

The rebuilding of the navy and a system of coast defenses.

The regulation of immigration so as to exclude convict and pauper labor and the criminal classes.

A liberal system of pensions.

A free ballot and a fair count in national elections.

The restoration of the Republican party to power in the national house of representatives, and the rescue of that branch of the government from the control of the Democratic party which, under the rule of the Democratic party, has been the cause of the national disaster, and against the billion dollar congress, appropriates more money during the present session of congress than has been appropriated before in a single year during the existence of the government, and which under the present system of rules shows its marked incapacity to do the public business.

They recognize the remarkable success of President Harrison's administration, which in every department has been conducted with wisdom and prudence, and which has been characterized by high ability and high integrity, both at home and abroad, and they pledge to him their most cordial efforts to secure his re-election and to secure to him the support of the Republican party.

They dwell with pride upon the eminent public service and the high career of Maine's great leader, James G. Blaine, and they take this opportunity of expressing to him their undiminished trust and affection.

The congratulatory state upon the course of his distinguished career, in all branches of the national government, and tender to them cordial thanks for their marked ability and for the high position which they have occupied in the discharge of their duties at the national capital.

The platform read, the committee appointed to escort Mr. Cleaves to the hall, appeared with him. His appearance was the signal for an outburst of applause, and as he advanced he introduced the delegates arose and cheered loudly, waving their hats and canes by way of additional demonstration.

Mr. Cleaves's Speech.

Mr. Cleaves stated that he came before the convention to thank them for the honor they had chosen to bestow upon him with so great unanimity; that he was not insensible to the heartiness of the action of the convention, and that he appreciated the responsibility imposed and the services required. Should their action be ratified by the people of Maine he should endeavor to administer the trust imposed for the best interests of the state, constantly bearing in mind that the people were the sovereigns and that the executive was their representative and responsible to them. He should rely upon the co-operation of the Republicans of Maine in the coming contest. He reminded the convention that the great principles of the Republican party, that have been so long upheld by the people of this country, bringing peace, prosperity and growth to the nation, and that the producing classes and the laboring people had great interests at stake; that the party stands committed to the principles of a sound and stable currency, the freedom of the ballot, reciprocity and protection to American industries and homes. It is with glowing pride that we have come today from the cities and towns, from the verdant hills and the fertile valleys of Maine to salute the beautiful and prosperous city of Portland and to honor and crown one of her worthy citizens. We have come today to take him by the hand and to say to him with no dissenting voice, because you were a Union soldier, because you were faithful in the discharge of your duty as attorney general of Maine, because of your unflinching faith in the immortal principles of the Republican party and because of your integrity and honor, we select you as the mailed knight who shall win the undoubted gubernatorial victory on the twelfth day of September next by the gleaming sword of protective tariff and advancing banners of assured reciprocity. I therefore, in behalf of the delegation from Lincoln county second the nomination for the Republican candidate for Governor of the Hon. Henry B. Cleaves. For Henry B. Cleaves, the soldier boy who left his affectionate bride and home to fight in the defence of his country and flag, I now propose three cheers.

The cheers were given with a will. A. W. Gilman of Foxcroft, as a "hayseed fellow, who hoes the corn and milks the cows," as he described himself, captured the convention with his witty speech in seconding the nomination for Piscataquis.

James O. Bradbury, Esq.,
of Saco, seconded the nomination for York; and L. T. Carleton, Esq., of Winthrop, for Kennebec. Mr. Carleton spoke for Mr. Cleaves as an old soldier.

Judge A. R. Savage of Auburn spoke for Androscoggin; after which the vote was put.

"All delegates in favor of the nomination of Henry B. Cleaves, will rise," said Chairman Heath.

The scene that followed in the hall was remarkable. Probably never more than in the history of the history of the Republican party of Maine, has such a scene been witnessed in a state gubernatorial convention. The delegates on floor and galleries arose as one body; the chairman declared the nomination unanimous, and simultaneously the great audience broke into a loud cheer.

Messrs. T. R. Simonton of Camden, L. T. Carleton of Winthrop and S. W. Matthews of Caribou were appointed a committee to notify Mr. Cleaves of his nomination and escort him to the hall.

Mr. Cleaves paid a tribute to the men who saved the republic and said that the principle was then established for all time that this nation had the right and the power to preserve its own life, and that the American people in this contest would determine that they had the right to protect and preserve their own prosperity. He said the old soldiers of the republic, who by their sacrifices and by reason of wounds received or disabilities incurred were no longer able to do battle in the active affairs of life, should have food and shelter; that they should have as men and not as charity-ity; that he believed this to be sound Republican doctrine and a principle that would be upheld by the people of the country, young and old.

Mr. Cleaves commended the administration of President Harrison and the wise and vigorous policy of the State Department under the direction of Maine's distinguished statesman, Mr. Blaine.

There were cries for

"Milliken, Milliken."

When Mr. Cleaves had concluded. Mr. Milliken appeared, and was loudly cheered as he responded. He said he realized that the audience had already been sufficed with oratory and he would not be long. He always thought on such occasions of the preacher, who having tired his audience out by talking over four hours, remarked:

"Excuse me if I am long, but I am talking for posterity."

"And they will be here before you get through, too," said an old fellow in the audience.

Shouts of laughter greeted this story, after which Mr. Milliken proceeded to make a bright, but rather long speech upon the issues of the day, contrasting the record of the last Republican Congress, with its long roll of great acts of legislation, with the record of this, which has done nothing except to "get stuck in the mud on the silver bill."

Mr. Milliken having concluded, there were cries for "Boutelle, Boutelle," and Mr. Boutelle was received with loud applause. Mr. Boutelle said that he had no apprehension this year that Maine would not this year, as in other years, give her electoral votes for the Republican ticket. Especially was this confidence increased by the knowledge that the standard bearer was to be an honored son of Portland, Hon. Henry B. Cleaves. Mr. Boutelle had little time for a speech, as the other orators had used about all the time, but what he did say was good and received applause.

Before the convention broke up Secretary of State Fessenden got adopted a resolution that the state committee be authorized to fill any vacancies that might occur in the board of Presidential electors.

Convention Notes.

The Atkinson Company distributed fans during the forenoon session of the convention, and these were greatly appreciated in the heated hall.

It seems strange that when the Republican state convention was in session yesterday, the flag was not hoisted over City Hall. We do not recall a time before when this has happened.

A prominent Democratic ward politician came into the hall just after Judge Symonds's address, and said to a well known Republican standing by the door "Say, when will they nominate the sherrif?" "Oh," said the Republican, "just after the next speech." "Oh, well," said the Democrat, "then I'll be back pretty soon; I don't want to lose that."

THE EVENING.

Young Men's Republican Club Fittingly Ends the Day.

The Young Men's Republican Club fittingly capped the climax of the grand Republican celebration of the day by a reception to Mr. Cleaves last evening. The rooms of the club were brilliantly illuminated and decorated with flags. Outside Chandler's Band played until 8 o'clock, when the victorious old banner of the club that flew in the '88 campaign was again flung to the breeze decorated with the new names for '92. In the reception rooms above the young men of the club had gathered in large numbers. Among those who were present from out of town were Collector Luce and Herbert M. Lord of Rockland, F. M. Higgins, Esq., of Limerick, Judge Downs of Calais, Hon. Stanley Plummer, postmaster of the United States Senate, and others.

When Mr. Cleaves arrived he was greeted by President Reynolds and members of the club. President Reynolds introduced Mr. Cleaves in a felicitous speech, and Mr. Cleaves responded, receiving three cheers as he closed.

President Carroll W. Morrill next responded for the Lincoln Club.

Charles S. Cook, Esq., of Portland responded as an ex-president of the club. Among other things he called the attention of the young men to the duty which they owed to support the man who was in this county fulfilling his oath of office. "Rectitude in public office," said Mr. Cook, "is made the sole reason by the Democracy for seeking the defeat of a man who has been true to his oath as every man should. And I hope that the young men of this club will support Sheriff Cram, as he deserves to be for his honest course."

Ex-President Walter C. Emerson was next called upon and spoke briefly but to the point of the necessity for the club to work in the coming campaign. Mr. H. M. Lord of Rockland followed with a patriotic Republican speech. Then followed a call for Mr. Higgins of Limerick, but he had left the hall.

The meeting then broke up with cheers for the candidate.

ANY Consumptive

That has been under medical treatment three months without relief, we will send one case of Murdoch's Liquid Food, Boston, free of charge.

IF

under treatment for three months has had no relief, we will give one case of Murdoch's Liquid Food free of cost.

Our reasons for the above offer are that we have never known a case of paralysis that we have not cured or very much helped, or a consumptive that has not been either cured or a strong testimony that life has been very much prolonged by its use.

In all cases of Disease beneficial results are sure to be obtained by the use of Murdoch's Liquid Food. This statement is attested by the crucial test of over THREE THOUSAND operations in a prominent hospital in this country, and by its use the unprecedented record was reported of a loss by death of only five patients in a thousand, and many of these difficult cases of surgery. We shall be pleased to give any inquirer the further facts, but the above is convincing proof that Murdoch's Liquid Food is not an artificial stimulant to the system, but though it can be given in the most extreme cases of exhaustion with perfect safety, its influence is permanent and without a reactionary influence deleterious to the system.

We would remind the public that no substitute (and there are many so-called Foods and Food Extracts in the market) has a record in any way approaching the results of the Murdoch Liquid Food in the past 12 years.

OUR IDEAL.

Have we not all, 'mid life's petty strife,
Some pure ideal of a noble life
That once seemed possible? Did we not hear
The flutter of its wings, and feel it near,
And just within our reach? It was. And yet
We lost it in this daily jae and fret.
But still our place is kept and it will wait
Ready for us to fill it, soon or late.
No star is ever lost we once have seen;
We always may be what we might have been.

A RACE FOR LIFE.

Among the many thrilling adventures of the early Rocky mountain traders there is none more interesting than that of Colter's race for life with over 600 armed and bloodthirsty Blackfoot Indians, one of the most cruel of the western tribes. Colter had accompanied Lewis and Clark in their expedition to the upper waters of the Missouri, but forming a partnership with a man named Potts the two obtained permission from Lewis to stop for the purpose of trapping and hunting. Lewis at the same time recommended them to exercise the greatest prudence and cunning in regard to the Indians, whom he had learned to his cost to be as treacherous and as savage as panthers.

The plan pursued by the partners was to set their traps late in the evening, visit them at early dawn and, after removing them and the game, hide all day. This course succeeded splendidly for some time, and the men grew a little careless in removing all trace of their presence. One morning while rowing up the river in their canoe they heard a heavy tramp as of many feet. Colter declared it to be Indians, and was for abandoning the canoe and taking to the woods, but Potts, who was the older man, laughed at him and pronounced the feet those of buffaloes. The question was soon settled by them sending themselves by a stroke of the oars right into the midst of several hundred Indians that lined the shore.

Colter, seeing in a moment that escape was impossible, obeyed when they called him to come ashore and rowed close to the bank. He and Potts were just stepping up, when an Indian snatched Potts' rifle. Colter, a powerful man, wrested the weapon away from the savage at once and returned it to Potts, who seemed to lose himself completely. He threw himself back into the canoe and pushed it out into the stream. Colter, who hoped to release them from their position by strategy, called to him to come back, but the panic-stricken man kept out in the current, and presently cried to Colter, "Oh, I am wounded!" Colter turned just in time to see the Indian that had shot Potts lowering his bow from his aim, and while he looked he saw the Indian drop dead and heard the report of Potts' rifle.

A second after Potts' lifeless body fell back in the canoe, pierced by a hundred arrows. Colter was now in for it. The Indians stripped him of his clothes and held a consultation as to what was to be done with him. Colter, who knew their language slightly, gathered that some of his amiable captors proposed to whip him to death, some to skin him alive, while others wanted to burn him at the stake, but the chief, a burly old chap, with some originality decided the question by declaring that if he was not too swift a runner that he should have a chance for his life. If he could get away he might, but if he was recaptured they would burn him alive.

The chief approached the prisoner and asked if he was a good runner. Colter replied that he was a very poor one, while in reality he knew himself to be one of the swiftest foot racers on the border. His answer was hailed with delight by the Indians, who were promising themselves great diversion with the white man. The 600 Indians were stationed at one point and Colter given a start of 200 hundred yards, that the sport might not be too quickly ended. With a whoop from the Indians the race began.

Like an arrow from the bow the prisoner shot forward, and the duped Blackfeet saw that it would put them to all they knew to overtake their human prey, or even to approach him near enough to shoot him. They had one great advantage over the white man, however, and they counted largely on this to give them the victory. Their feet were protected by moccasins, while those of the trapper were naked and exposed to the sandbars and cedars, with which the plain was thickly set. These pierced Colter's feet terribly, but he could not pause for such trifles. He had run three of the six miles that lay between him and the Jefferson fork of the Missouri, for which he had made before he dared to look back. When he did he saw that he had, with one exception, left all his pursuers far behind. One warrior alone still held out, and with his spear held aloft came on with the speed of a greyhound.

He was within a hundred yards of the white man when Colter, resolved to save himself if it lay in human power, put forth a tremendous effort and tore on with all his speed. The blood lured from his nose and a slight hemorrhage also filled his mouth, but he pushed on, frantic at the idea of being retaken after his superhuman efforts. He had nearly reached the river when he looked back once more, and to his dismay he saw that his pursuer was not thirty feet behind him and was just in the act of hurling his spear. With incredible celerity he whirled about, and before the savage could check his rapid course ran right into the Indian's arms.

Colter's unexpected action and his bloody appearance so startled the Blackfoot that he stumbled, and the lance, thrown ten feet, stuck in the ground and broke off. While the redskin tried to recover his equilibrium, Colter picked up the piece of spear that retained the head and drove it through the body of the Indian, pinning him to the ground a dead man. But fearing that the rest of the band would presently appear, the trapper stopped only long enough to secure the dead man's weapons and then ran on, reaching the river more dead than alive.

After a rest of a minute or two he plunged into the stream and swam a short distance to a drift of trash and limbs of trees and brush. This drift had lodged against the shore of a small sand bank and Colter dived beneath it, coming up with his head among the thickest lodged branches. In a few minutes the Indians reached the dead body of the warrior, whom Colter now knew to have been a chief by the wailing of the band over his corpse. When this expression of grief was over, Colter heard their yells for vengeance, and, knowing that if captured that a death by the most horrible torture awaited him, resolved to drown himself rather than fall into their hands. They ran to the banks of the stream and, suspecting his hiding place, swam out to it, and twenty times the trapper sank beneath the drift by grasping a sunken tree that was imbedded in the sand. But, though the Blackfeet spent over an hour searching for him and poking the drift with their spears, they finally concluded that he had gone farther down the river and departed to beat the banks.

Heard by the wretched trapper, they spent nearly the whole day searching for him, but returned toward evening to the spot where the dead chief lay, and Colter could tell by their retreating voices as they wailed that they were carrying home the body. As soon as he thought they must be out of sight, Colter crawled out, so chilled by the water that he could scarcely use his limbs, and so exhausted by the loss of blood and his terrible race that he thought himself dying. But courage revived after a time, and he started for Lisa's fort on the Yellowstone.

His situation was so desperate that he dared not let his mind dwell on it, for fear that he would lose his resolution and die of despair. The fort, the nearest place where he could hope to fall in with a white man, lay a full week's journey from him, and he was not only stark naked, but without a weapon with which he could kill game and so support life. His feet were in a fearful condition, cut by the sharp rocks and the thorns of the cacti over which he had run his race. Exposed to the heat of the sun by day and the dews of night, and tortured often by hunger and thirst, the trapper still pushed on, determined to live through it all.

He subsisted for days on the wild plant known as sheep sorrel, and the few weeds and grasses peculiar to the stretch of country over which his way lay. One day he found the hole of a rabbit, in which was a litter of young. Having no way of cooking, and too famished to wait to do it if he had had, Colter seized the little creatures and hastily killed them with a sharp stone that seamed him for a knife, devoured their still palpitating bodies, tearing off their skins with his naked hands. On another occasion Colter attacked a wildcat with only his stone weapon and killed it, sucking the blood and eating it to the very entrails.

On the ninth day after he had escaped from the Blackfeet a party of two traders and a trapper named McLellan set out from Lisa's fort for the south, and when about six miles on their journey came across an object lying on the plain with several buzzards hovering over it. Taking it for the carcass of a calf or deer the travelers were about to pass it at the distance of twenty or thirty yards, when McLellan happened to see it make a gesture, as if to fight off a buzzard that had alighted near it. The movement excited the hunter's curiosity and he rode nearer the object.

"Good God!" he cried. "Boys, it is a man!" It was Colter, who, unable to take another step, had lain down to die. He was blistered from head to foot by the sun's fierce heat, and had had nothing to eat for over two days and no water for twenty-four hours. With all possible care he was taken back to the fort and there regained his health and strength. With his sufferings in mind Colter became an Indian scout, and is said to have killed with his own hand a hundred Blackfeet. He wore a belt to which dangled the scalps of that number of that tribe.—Philadelphia Times.

Bottles in the Sea.
The prince of Monaco had upward of 1,670 large bottles, incased in a thin copper covering, thrown into the sea at different points of the ocean between Europe and America, and of these 226 have been returned to him by the governments of the various countries to the shores of which they had drifted, and their progress has been noted with sufficient accuracy to lead to the conviction that the movement of the upper part of the water is circular, the center being to the west of the Azores. The tide of the Atlantic thus descends the coast of Africa, and, running in a westerly direction, flows on toward Bermuda, and then turns eastward.

The speed at which the bottles traveled is estimated at an average of four miles in twenty-four hours, though at some points they attained a rate of six miles. It was in the western half of the circle thus described that the rapidity was greatest. One bottle had drifted about for upward of five years.—Fall Mail Gazette.

STACKING HAY AND GRAIN.

Important Points to Be Observed in the Construction of the Stack.
As between the two usual methods of preserving hay and grain from damage, after these have been harvested and properly cured, storing in the shelter of a good barn will result in the least loss. It is, however, often necessary to stack a portion of one or both of these crops from the want of sufficient barn space. In such cases it is highly important that the stack be properly constructed. The agricultural editor of the New York World has the following to say on this subject:

The safety of the grain or hay to be stacked depends largely on the expertness of the man who builds the stack. Any farm hand can pitch hay or sheaves of grain from a wagon, but unless the stacker is a man of some experience in the business and with a good eye for proportions and outlines the stack is quite certain to be faulty in shape, and probably so lopsided that one-half of it will offer but little resistance to rain.

While the shape of a stack is very important, the manner of laying on the hay or sheaves while building it is equally so. In all cases the center of the stack should be kept the highest, so that the incline of the sheaves or forklifts of hay as they are laid on shall be outward. Again, hay should not be tramped down on the stack in wads and rolls, but should fall flat from the fork so as to make a compact and water resisting a body as possible.

When a stack has been properly topped off and presents no rough or jagged outlines from top to bottom, it affords quite a safe method for protecting either hay or grain that cannot be cared for in a barn.

Clover is more liable to damage and harder to be protected from wet in stacks than are the finer stemmed hay grasses, and where there is only room for one variety of hay in the barn it is best to put the clover into the mow.

Mr. Thomas H. Flaherty and sister, Miss Emily, are in Brunswick attending the commencement at Bowdoin College.

It Has Come To This

That every successful, meritorious article has its imitations. This is a grave injustice, for the genuine pure article will often be judged by the imitation. No preparations require for their manufacture more care and skill, more costly and purer materials, than Flavoring Extracts. In this instance cheap materials mean inferior flavors. Dr. Price's Delicious Flavoring Extracts have won their way to public confidence by the pure and costly materials used, the new processes employed for extracting from the fruits their natural flavoring principles. In using Dr. Price's Orange, Lemon, Vanilla or other flavors the housewife will never fail to obtain the grateful flavor desired.

A Rare Book.

A book of 85 pages covered with vellum in a dilapidated state with a title "Introduction to the Study of Electricity," published in London in the year 1749, printed for J. Dodsley in Pall Mall. This book describes many of the uses to which electricity is applied at the present time and claimed to be new inventions. The book is to be used in one of the most important patent suits to be tried in Chicago. Mr. S. P. Mayberry, the owner, will not let it leave his possession but will take it to the court. On the fly leaf is the autograph of Benjamin West, the celebrated painter, and the book was owned by him.

Nichols-Stoneham.

A very pretty home wedding occurred yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, Mr. W. P. Stoneham, 89 Gray street, Dr. Henry Blanchard officiating. The contracting parties were his only daughter, Mabel Alice, and Mr. Clarence A. Nichols, traveling salesman for Byron Greenough & Co. The bride was becomingly dressed in white silk, while the groom wore the conventional color. Numerous and costly gifts attested the popularity of the young people. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols left on the 1 o'clock train for a short trip west.

Washburn's Circus.

Washburn's Circus and Wild West Show which will appear in Portland, Tuesday, June 28th, will no doubt be a treat to the circus young people. This is what the Fall River News says of the performance: "Leon W. Washburn's circus played here yesterday afternoon and evening, and the capacity of their large tent was tested at both performances. They gave a show well worthy of their large patronage and everyone went away more than pleased. The people are all first class artists in their specialties. Should they return here their large tent would not begin to hold the people. The News bespeaks their success wherever they appear."

Deering City Meeting.

At a special meeting of the Deering city government held Monday evening, petitions were presented for a hydrant on Pitt street, corner of School street, and for a sewer pipe in the school house; by the Republicans city committee for the use of the City Hall for meetings and caucuses; for a new sidewalk on the north side of William street. The petition were referred, except that for the use of City Hall, which was granted. The matter of the land deed was laid on the table.

THE GRAND TRUNK ACCIDENT.

Further Particulars of the Sad Affair Near Coaticook.

Further intelligence received from the sad accident on the Grand Trunk at Coaticook shows that the washout that caused the disaster was 120 feet wide by 75 feet deep. The engineers have drawn off enough water to expose the wrecked engine. When the accident occurred investigation has shown that the engine passed over the washout about one-half of its own length as shown by the marks on the rails and when the cars behind struck the engine they jack-knived over. The engine rested on the baggage and express cars, crushing them, while the second-class car went down with the wreck. The first-class car was so fortunate as to stick to the rails. The second-class car went down stream and landed on the rocks below and was demolished. In the second-class car there was but one passenger as far as is known, whose name the authorities do not know and who lies under the ruins. There was also a man, it is reported, who was riding on the engine with the driver, and who must have perished. A brakeman was also killed. That brings the list of killed up to seven, besides the four whose names were given yesterday. The conductor escaped. All the occupants of the first-class car were shaken up and injured more or less, but fortunately the morning train out of Island Pond Monday is always a light one, as far as passengers are concerned. Fireman Reid's body was found yesterday in a position which indicates he must have jumped from the cab. The body of Mr. Small was brought to North Yarmouth yesterday.

Portland Commandery Excursion.

Special cars will leave the Union Station at 8.30 a. m., St. John's Day, Friday June 24th, for Poland Springs, and as the cars are to be attached to the regular train it is imperative that every Sir Knight of Portland Commandery and his ladies should be on time. The return trip will be made on Saturday afternoon, arriving in Portland at 5.45 p. m. Tickets good to return until Monday, June 27th, inclusive.

The well known reputation of the Poland Spring House, together with the music furnished by Chandler's orchestra and the Haydn Quartette, consisting of Miss Florence Knight, soprano, Miss Kate Ricker contralto, Dr. H. M. Nickerson tenor, and Harry Merrill basso, will make this one of the most pleasant events in the history of Portland Commandery. Sir Knights who have not notified the committee of their intentions are requested to do so at once. The party will number from 125 to 150, and a good time is confidently expected.

McAll Association.

The McAll Association held a pleasant and profitable parlor meeting at the house of Mr. Charles J. Chapman yesterday afternoon. There were about 45 ladies present.

Miss Twitchell gave a brief but bright account of her visit to one of the salles in Paris, and Mrs. Dr. Fenn gave a very vivid and interesting report of the annual meeting of the American McAll Association recently held in New York.

The sum of $10 was raised toward a deficit in the mission work in France, and several new members were added.

Mr. Hinkley of the Good Will Home for boys in East Fairfield was then introduced and spoke in a pleasant and interesting manner concerning his work.

At the close of the exercises tea and refreshments were served by several young ladies and a season of social intercourse closed the work of the year.

Where Is Miss Calhoun?

An English detective and a young man, whose name could not be learned, are in this country, searching for Bridget Ann Calhoun, who ran away from home in Manchester, England. The young man is supposed to be the girl's brother. Miss Calhoun ran away with a man who had the gripe and committed suicide on the passage to this country. Afterwards, it is said, she fell in love with a man belonging in this city who deserted her. She belongs to a wealthy family.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Pavilion Theatre.

This weather is making people think of going to the islands. Manager McCallum will be all ready to receive the large numbers at the grand opening next Monday night, when all will have a chance to see "The Paymaster," a first class drama in four acts. The company have about all arrived and rehearsals commence today. Mr. McCallum gives his word that the entertainment will be of the best.

The Mock Court Trial.

Tonight the great mock court trial for the theft of that Plymouth Rock rooster will take place at City Hall. The hall will be open at 7 o'clock and the court will come in at 8 o'clock. The following is the list of those who will take part:

Judge, Wilford G. Chapman, Complainant, Col. A. W. Bradbury, Attorney for prosecution, J. K. Green, Esq., Worcester, Mass. Defendant, Capt. George E. Brown, Attorney for defendant, A. V. Newton, Esq., Worcester, Mass. Officer, City Marshal Geo. L. Sweet, Clerk of court, Benjamin C. Stone, Witnesses, R. K. Gately, Esq., Hon. H. S. Melcher, E. C. Miliken, Esq., Dr. S. P. Getchell, George F. French, Esq., Jury, foreman, Judge Gould; John L. Shaw, Esq., Major Wm. H. Green, Capt. Geo. H. Abbott, Stephen Marsh, Esq., Caleb N. Lang, Esq., Isaac C. Atkinson, Esq., Col. Chas. D. Clark, Andrew J. Rich, Esq., John H. Fogg, Esq., Geo. H. Libby, Esq., Capt. Whitman Sawyer.

You must see this trial for it will be one of the funniest things of the day.

Oscar Welch, who stole Ward Parlin's team in Farmington on June 3d, was arrested in Perkins Plantation. Monday he was given a hearing in Farmington, and bound over for trial.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Harrison delegates to the county convention are Philander Tolman, A. P. Ricker, M. T. Merrow. At the caucus N. H. Seavey, Esq., withdrew his name as a candidate for the office of county commissioner. The delegation was chosen by a vote of 74 out of 75 votes thrown, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the out-going member of the board of county commissioners will leave the northern portion of the county without a representative on the board, and

Whereas, the town of Harrison has never had a county office, be it

Resolved, That the Republicans of Harrison in caucus assembled, do most earnestly ask and request the Republicans of the county of Cumberland to nominate our esteemed townsman Chas. A. Lang, Esq., for the office of county commissioner.

Resolved, That the delegates from Harrison are hereby requested to use all honorable means to secure the nomination of Charles A. Lang, Esq., for the office of county commissioner.

We are authorized to state that Wm. H. Looney, Esq., has withdrawn from the contest for the state senatorial nomination for the Portland division. Mr. Looney said yesterday that the considerations which prompted his withdrawal were purely personal. He had, he said, determined long since to withdraw from active participation in politics, and devote himself entirely to the practice of his profession—to acquiring strength and ability as a lawyer.

Many of the wage-earners, and politicians of the party, particularly among the younger element, had persuaded him to become a candidate for senator, and he felt reasonably sure of the nomination. But the conviction was forced upon him that his best interests demanded his withdrawal. This too was the advice of a few of his warmest friends whom he had consulted. He tendered his heartfelt thanks to his many friends who had so generously assisted him, and promised to do everything in his power to promote the success of the Republican ticket this fall.

OBITUARY.

Joseph Chamberlain.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, who for many years owned and kept the Ocean House at Cape Elizabeth, died yesterday forenoon at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Edward F. Hill, of Cape Elizabeth. Mr. Chamberlain was 70 years old, and one of the old residents of the Cape. The funeral will be held at 2 o'clock Thursday from the Bowery Beach church.

The Fraternity Reunion.

The sixth annual reunion of the members of the Portland Fraternity at Long Island, yesterday, was an event much enjoyed by all present. The beautiful weather brought out a much larger attendance than was expected and no end of amusement was derived from the various sports of the day, which included base ball, foot ball, etc. The base ball game was won by the Kickers, "Jake" Rosenberg, captain, score 15 to 14. Mr. Mitchell served the dinner in his usual excellent manner. Speeches were made by Messrs. J. C. Woodill, J. H. Hamel, T. J. Murphy, W. J. Shaw and F. J. Mitchell. A permanent organization was formed and the following officers were elected:

President—J. H. Hamel. Vice President—F. J. Maguire. Secretary—F. J. Mitchell. Treasurer—J. C. Woodill. Executive Committee—J. W. Mitchell, J. A. Dickson, T. J. Murphy.

The reunion was a great success and reflects great credit on the committee of arrangements.
